

Archaeological Field School

Santa Barbara Presidio

SUMMER 2011

JULY 5-AUGUST 12

Course Description

An intensive 6-week combination of excavations and laboratory analysis of historical archaeological materials from the northern yard of the Spanish presidio of Santa Barbara. The presidio was founded in 1782, the last of four military posts in Spanish California intended to defend the province from foreign invasion. Attention will be focused on architectural remains which may provide information for future reconstruction.

The presidio is located in the heart of downtown Santa Barbara. Students should expect cool foggy nights and warm sunny afternoons while in an ideal climate. The class can be accommodated at no charge at a group campsite at El Capitan State Beach, where hot showers and electricity are available. Sleeping bags must be provided by the students, who are also responsible for their own food. Other arrangements may be made. Students should be in good physical condition. Tetanus shots are required.
